In explaining his ideas the baron "The American contestants were successful primarily because of their scientific training, and next, on account of their morale, that is to say their minds were made up beforehand to win. Finally, their intense patriotism, when pit-ted against other nations, was an added reason. "Scientific training alone cannot win, in my judgment, without moral training and patriotism. The Finnish athletes were without the first, as they came from a poor country, but with the other two attributes they did splendidly. Not only the body but the mind must be trained to win in sports, and the athletes of many nations overlook this, but not the Americans." Referring to the Thorpe case, the bar-

"There is a deep reason for that. Over in Great Britain there are about 1,500,000 women who have no man. We have no such condition over here. soon as every woman has a man the women get to be very peaceful. But just Knobel, Last of Band Which Captured think of 1,500,000 women without a man I do not blame them for getting mad. They ought to tear down all England.

"The men got up and went off to Australia and Canada and Van Dieman's Land, and Lord knows where else, and eft the women there. And now we are having the result. The women are going to burn the whole place down unless ey are allowed to vote. But will it do them any good if they are allowed to vote? Voting will not get them hus-bands. They will be as bad off in that respect as ever. Over here there is no such numerical disparity between men and women. I suppose most of our women suffragists are married.
